

Custom Training Solutions for Government

Government agencies are endlessly pressured to recover savings through efficiency measures. Budgets tighten, full-time employee (FTE) levels are capped, and travel is replaced with the teleconference. But the need for workforce training doesn't change. In fact, for government agencies, there is no margin of error in matching regulatory requirements.

Workforce training programs are an overlooked area for recovering operational efficiencies—that is true for the public and private sector. Because the total size of the workforce employed by government entities is generally large, and relatively stable, the opportunity for efficiency in the government sector, by modernizing training programs, shouldn't be ignored.

Today, cities, states, and agencies of the federal government are realizing the savings from taking workforce training online. Vivid offers this alternative to the traditional live training experience, with Safety Training Systems that automate accountability, and on demand courses created by instructional designers and digital creatives.

Innovation isn't a buzzword here.

At Vivid, we code our own software, design our courses, and work with digital film and HTML 5, to deliver smart training solutions to government clients. Because of Vivid's creative production capabilities and experienced instructional designers, government entities have worked with Vivid on custom training projects for over a decade—ask us about these projects.

Vivid's online workforce training experience can recover lost productivity, build efficiency, fix costs for training programs, and bring back accountability.

Vivid's Story

Vivid is first a product of the Hanford Nuclear Site—hardhat, steeled toe, high-risk industrial scenarios have always been home for us. In 1995, a handful of federal colleagues had been challenged by the Department of Energy to disrupt the traditional training experience by making it digital, taking it to the personal computer. Vivid was a 'tech startup' before the phrase was popular and the company has kept the flame of innovation alive in confronting new challenges.

Better training, smarter workforce.
We get it.
